Ex-Mail Robber Confers On a Monte Carlo Plan for Havana

WASHINGTON—Cuban revolutionaries now in the saddle in Havana have appealed to the bankers in New York for a small loan to fill their empty treasury. The bankers replied with an emphatic "No!"

"No more loans until you pay up back debts," they said in effect. So now the Cubans are looking for other sources of revenue.

A prominent Cuban interviewed Benny Covel, ex-mail robber, in the Willard Hotel the other day. Covel served a long term at Leavenworth and was a friend of Frank Nash, killed at the Kansas City Union Station massacre.

But he was talking to the Cuban about other things. The idea is to set up a big new gambling establishment in Havana, create a new Monte Carlo for American tourists. This would mean revenue.

Old Enemies

In 1914, Ben B. Lindsey, then Juvenile Court Judge of Denver, won a tremendous labor victory in Washington. He persuaded Woodrow Wilson to send federal troops to check the paid police of Rockefeller's Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.

Last week Lindsey came to Washington again for the first time in 19 years, again won a tremendous labor victory. He got a favorable decision from the NRA Labor Board in the strike of Hollywood's "Sound Men"—key electricians in talking pictures.

In this fight his chief supporter was one of Rockefeller's right hand men—Walter Teagle of Standard Oil of New Jersey. Also supporting him was another Baron of Big Business—Gerard Swope, head of General Electric. Both are members of the Labor Board.

Judge Lindsey's fight was the most complicated so far before the Board. Although he was fighting for labor he had the A. F. of L. against him. This was because two unions opposed each other. One was the International Alliance of Stage Workers to which Hollywood's Sound Men belong. The other was the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers—250,000 strong, but including only seven Sound Men.

When the Sound Men struck, big movie executives brought in the Electrical Workers to break the strike. Thus one union was pitted against the other. And since Bill Green, president of the A. F. of L. is up for election in October, and since the Electrical Workers have 250,000 members, he sided with them.

Sabotage

A secret drive is on against Roosevelt's farm relief program. The spearhead of the drive is the textile industry. That is what is behind Secretary Wallace's sudden hearings on the cotton processing tax.

The textile manufacturers are worried. They say prices are soaring because they have to bear the brunt of the bounty to the cotton growers. But what really happened is this. During the spring and early summer, the textile people—knowing prices would jump—ran three shifts a day. They glutted their warehouses with goods. They also lifted their prices. Now there is a wholesale buyers' strike against them.

So the manufacturers are looking for a way out. They want the Treasury to bear the cost of the $110,000,000 cotton tax. They want this just as the Government is sending checks to cotton growers who

150 WORKERS CANVASS CITY WITH PLEDGES

Volunteer Army Making Thorough Job of NRA Campaign in City

STATE BUSY ALSO

"Visit Every House," is National Order

A voluntary army, 150 strong, was engaged in Circleville today in a war such as never has been waged before in any country. This army comprises the local volunteer workers in the Blue Eagle campaign. Each member of the army is wearing a button by way of identification upon which is found the word "Volunteer."

And while this army of workers is advancing along the Circleville battle front, there are similar armies moving along similar fronts in every community in the United States, including the Hawaiian Islands. It is an army of 1,500,000 soldiers of Uncle Sam setting forth to rout the forces of unemployment.

"We are making a thorough job of it," said "Gen." R. L. Brehmer in command of the local sector of the Blue Eagle battle front, this morning while giving directions for last minute preparations. "By the end of the day we hope to have our canvassers call at every home in Circleville. The object of this house to house canvass, is to see that every family in Circleville signs the consumer's agreement with the President and displays the insignia."

TWO MILLIONS BACK AT WORK

—SAYS JOHNSON

Speakers All Over Country Active In Interest of NRA Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Two million men have been re-employed from the ranks of the nation's estimated 12,000,000 idle. Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the National Recovery Act, declared last night as he joined hundreds of speakers in all sections of the country in urging employers and consumers to support the aims represented by the Blue Eagle emblem of the NRA.

The figures were the first public estimate ever given by the former army officer, chosen by President Roosevelt to lead the nation back to the path of "happy days."

Today, Johnson will address those in charge of the campaign in the New England sector, at Boston. He is accompanied by Edward F. McGrady, assistant administrator.

With Johnson, opening the great campaign in the capital were Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, widow of the war president, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for the NRA.

Mrs. Wilson addressed a letter from her "S" street home in Washington, calling upon the men and women of America to follow the example of America in 1917.

LONG'D BE GOOD FREAK LUNA PARK MANAGER BELIEVES

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Huey Long can have a new job if he wants it.

Declaring the flame-thatched U. S. Senator from Louisiana by virtue of his "recent pugilistic activities" may claim to be "the most picturesque man in America," the manager of Coney Island's Luna park today sent a telegram to Huey offering him $1,000 nightly "to appear as a freak attraction at Luna park."

Bert Nevins, spokesman for the park management, declared the offer was made in good faith.

Hunt Creek For Victims Of Train

Salvage Crews Seek Missing As Several Passengers Are Un-reported After Train Goes Through Bridge; Eight Known Dead and 40 Injured.

TUCUMCARI, N. M., Aug. 30.—Salvage crews today were searching Blue Water creek for additional victims who were missing after the Golden State limited, crack transcontinental passenger train, plunged through a storm-weakened bridge killing eight persons and injuring 40 others.

Rescue workers, after surveying the wreckage of the locomotive and six cars and checking over the list of missing, feared that several might have been swept away in the swirling flow of the flooded creek.

The Southern Pacific limited was enroute from Los Angeles to Chicago when it fell through the bridge five miles west of here.

The identified dead were:

C. J. Croft, engineer of Tucumcari.

J. Randall, fireman of Tucumcari.

Mrs. W. H. Varley, Quincy, Ill.

W. H. Varley, Quincy, Ill.

Sister Mary Cecilia, Tucson, Ariz.

F. D. Cook of El Paso, Tex.

The bodies of two unidentified women were also recovered from the wreck.

Four inches of rainfall had carried the creek to flood stage, weakening the bridge supports.

Six cars followed the locomotive into the arroyo, but five sleeping cars stayed on the rails.

Bodies of the dead and the injured passengers had to be hoisted more than 75 feet to the brink of the gorge. The injured were hurried here over wet and slippery roads to the one small hospital and two hotels. Several of those who

WASHINGTON JOINS REPEAL

Two-thirds Mark In Drive Reached; 91 of 99 Delegates Are 'Wet.'

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 30.—Washington's repeal vote mounted to a 3 to 1 landslide today as returns from outlying precincts were tabulated.

The vote in 1,784 precincts out of the state's 2,446 gave:

For repeal 311,187.

Against 131,802.

Washington thus became the 24th state to repudiate the eighteenth amendment.

The wet vote in Seattle was almost 4 to 1 with complete returns giving, 122,120 for repeal; 33,500 against.

The wet vote in other populous centers carried better than 2 to 1 in Yakima and Bellingham.

Party-two of the state's 46 districts reported decisive wet victories, indicating that 91 wet delegates, 6 dry and 2 unreported would be elected to the state's ratification convention October 3.

The only section of the state that recorded a decisive dry vote was the prohibition stronghold in southeastern Washington, a farming sector.

Wet majorities continued to increase, however, as later returns were tabulated.

With Washington in the repeal column the drive to remove the constitution of the United States had passed the two-thirds mark. Repeal votes in twelve more states remain necessary to abolish the amendment.

FIVE VICTIMS OF AIRPLANE CRASH

CLOVIS, N. M., Aug. 30.—Bodies of five victims of an airplane crash were in a Clovis mortuary today after a tri-motored mail and passenger transport plane struck Mesa mountain during a storm.

The bodies, all severely burned when recovered from the wreckage, were carried out of the rough badlands on pack horses and loaded into ambulances which brought them here.

The dead are Pilot H. R. Morgan and Co-pilot W. G. Barcus, both of Kansas City; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gore of Albuquerque, N. M., and their three year old granddaughter, Evelyn Gore.

AUTOS COLLIDE ON SCIOTO TRAIL

No one was injured late Tuesday afternoon when two autos sided-swiped on the curve near Bayer's tourist camp, Scioto trail, north of Circleville.

Orley Rutter, this city, driving a Chevrolet sedan and a Packard car, the driver of which is unknown, figured in the wreck. Both cars were damaged.

C. & O. BEGINS WORK ON ROAD

31,481 Tons of Rail Ties Ordered; Business Upswing Attributed.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 30.—An upswing in the steel and coal industries in Ohio was believed imminent today with announcement that the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad would place an order for 31,481 tons of railroad rails in the near future.

The action was believed to have been in response to the pleas of the federal coordinator of railroads in Washington that the carriers begin their improvement programs now.

Other railroads, according to reports, were expected to follow the action of the C. & O. and bring to fulfillment recent predictions that the railroads were on the threshold of an eight-month period of expanding activities.

Directors of the C. & O. authorized expenditure of $200,181 for improvements and officials of the Pere Marquette road, an affiliate, approved a $181,590 appropriation for improvements.

Although steel operations are at approximately 50 per cent of capacity as compared to 12 per cent in March, none of the mills is turning out railroad rails. Most of the steel is for automotive and allied industries.

FEW SEEK LOANS FOR HOMES HERE

Harness Discloses Only Six Have Filed Requests Under Federal Loan Plan.

Daniel R. Harness, Chillicothe, manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for Pickaway and Ross-counties, said Wednesday, that only six Pickaway-countians had applied for loans. His office is located in the post office here.

Mr. Harness pointed out that the purpose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is to save the homes of owners where the mortgage is threatening foreclosure. No loan will be over $14,000 or 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property. The indebtedness can be refinanced with bonds, with cash, and cash on unencumbered property.

Mr. Harness is at the local office every Tuesday and Wednesday and in Chillicothe other days of the week.

500,000 HOMELESS

SHANGHAI, Aug. 30.—Ten million dollars for relief of 500,000 homeless victims of the Yellow river flood was asked in a petition to the Nanking government today.

The funds were requested by delegates from the afflicted provinces.

NRA PLANNING DRIVE AGAINST ITS OPPOSITION

Plans Shaped to Deal With Minority Industrial 'Buckers'

OUTLINE PENALTIES

Huge 'Buy Now' Campaign Being Planned

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The National Recovery administration today is, with considerable reluctance, shaping plans to deal with industrial minorities which refuse to abide by codes of fair competition accepted by the majority.

The situation has come to the fore with developments which have assured Administrator Hugh S. Johnson of bringing the major industries of the nation under operating codes within the near future. While Johnson declared an entire industry is bound by a code—once it is proclaimed by the president—he is still uncertain of the method he will take to force the minority into compliance. At least one possible notable case is causing serious study.

RELIED ON PUBLIC

Thus far the recovery administrator has relied upon public opinion to force compliance with a code by all manufacturers in a given industry once the code has been announced for the industry. Recovery officials, however, do not expect this method to be entirely successful.

Under the Recovery act, a code of fair competition, having been approved by the president, becomes the standard of fair competition for the industry.

The law declares that "any violation of such standards in any transaction shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the federal trade commission act, as amended." A specific penalty of $50 for each day's offense is provided in the law.

As the bituminous coal code neared completion, with an agree-

NEW PHYSICIANS SENT TO ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 30.—Enlistment of eight more federal experts by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings today speeded up the campaign science is waging to curb the "sleeping sickness" epidemic here.

Twenty-five new cases of encephalitis raised the total since the epidemic began July 30 to 320. Four new fatalities yesterday raised the death toll to 44.

Escaped Kidnapers

William F. Wood, of Sausalito, Cal., returned reclamation firm official and cousin of former President William H. Taft, exhibits scars from wire with which kidnapers bound his wrists. Wood was held for four days in his own home. One of his kidnapers, Howard S. Meek was shot to death, after fatally wounding a policeman, when Wood attempted to escape.

Recall Riffle Wreck

Three Killed at Same Location Six Years Ago In Auto Crash.

As the story of the Eichinger tragedy was on the lips of all Circleville persons today, many recalled a similar tragedy which occurred at the same scene six years ago when three persons were killed.

The accident six years ago closely paralleled Tuesday evening's calamity. Mothers and daughters-in-law were killed in both accidents, the tragedies occurred about the same time and place and the same number of fatalities was noted.

Just as all of Circleville was stunned by the news of Tuesday evening's tragedy, so too, was the crowd in Circleville on Saturday evening, July 23, 1927, shocked, as the news regarding the terrible accident reached the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Riffle and infant son, Thomas Edward, and niece, Eleanor Timmons and Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle. Mr. Riffle's mother, were in a Studebaker enroute to town to do their Saturday night shopping when an Essex coach going east on Route 150, containing five men who were enroute to Chillicothe to attend a Moore convention crashed into their car.

Mrs. Bryan Riffle, aged 36, was instantly killed, her mother-in-law, Mrs. Eliza Riffle, aged 66, died the following morning, and Edward Laughlin 61, occupant of the other car, died the following evening as a result of the accident.

The accident was then written down as one of the worst in the county's history.

HOUSE HALTS SENATE REST

Settles Down To Raise Money As Demanded By Governor White.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 30.—Stalled in efforts to declare a recess until September 19 by a cantankerous house, the Ohio legislature today had no other alternative but to burrow into the work of raising $8,700,000 requested by Governor George White for school purposes.

Backed by a vigorous campaign, the movement for a three-week recess was swept through the senate yesterday with enthusiasm, but it bumped against stone-wall opposition in the lower house where it was definitely and decidedly rejected.

The recess plan, which was approved by the senate by a vote of 17 to 7, was to leave the special joint taxation committee at work during the recess to map out a feasible taxation program for

ARGENTINA SIGNS WHEAT AGREEMENT

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Argentina, which had threatened success of the new international wheat agreement by holding out after other major importing and exporting powers signed last Friday, today signed the pact.

Thomas Le Breton, Argentine ambassador to Paris and his country's chief delegate to the wheat talks, signed the agreement in the presence of Frederick E. Murphy, Minneapolis publisher and American delegate, Col. Zanier, Canadian high commissioner in London, and former Premier Stanley Bruce, of Australia.

OFFICER'S SLAYER SENTENCED TO DIE

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—John Schack, who shot a policeman dead in criminal court with a smuggled gun, was under sentence today to die in the electric chair after the jury returned its death verdict in 22 minutes.

It was the fastest death verdict ever reached in a Cook-co court.

METHODIST PASTOR, WIFE AND DAUGHTER-IN-LAW INSTANTLY KILLED; TWO OTHERS INJURED

Family Automobile Coming Toward Circleville From Middleport Collides With Heavy Oil Truck in Middle of Route 56, 159 Intersection; Avery Eichinger and William Blackford, Latter of Wellston, Patients in Hospital.

One of the most terrible tragedies in Circleville history occurred Tuesday at 5:20 p. m. when Rev. Charles H. Eichinger, 49, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, his wife, Mrs. Zella Eichinger, 48, and their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Louise Eichinger, 21, were instantly killed in an automobile-truck collision at Leistville, the intersection of state routes 56 and 159, seven miles southeast of this city.

Avery Eichinger, 26, son of the pastor and his wife, and driver of the Eichinger automobile, is in Berger hospital suffering from a fractured collar-bone, a bruised head and possible internal injuries, and William Blackford, 20, of Wellston, driver of the truck, is also in Berger hospital with a double fracture of the pelvis bone. The condition of neither of the two injured is thought serious. Both are also suffering from shock.

Coroner C. E. Bowers pronounced death accidental.

CAUSES OF DEATH

All the deceased were terribly mangled, any one of several injuries being enough to cause death. Dr. Bowers issued the following statement after his investigation of the causes of death: "Rev. Eichinger died of a crushed chest cavity, fractures of the left temple bone, right and left cheeks and right frontal bone; the pastor's wife died of a fractured skull, crushed left cheek, fractures of the lower right jaw and right arm and a crushed right chest; Mrs. Louise Eichinger died of a fractured skull and a broken neck, the third, fourth and fifth cervical vertebrae being fractured."

The Eichinger family was returning to this city after a trip to Middleport, Meigs-co. Mrs. C. H. Eichinger's aged mother has been seriously ill and the minister's wife had been in Middleport since last week. Tuesday morning Rev. Eichinger, his son Avery, daughter Miss Evelyn and Mrs. Louise Eichinger went to Middleport to return Mrs. Eichinger. Miss Evelyn, who would be a junior at Ohio University, Athens, this year, remained in Middleport to care for her grandmother, the others starting home.

Whether or not Avery Eichinger or Louise Eichinger, wife of Henry Eichinger, was driving the family car, a Willys-Knight sedan, is not certain. The injured youth told authorities he was driving but the truck driver said a woman was behind the wheel of the automobile.

Backed by a vigorous campaign, the movement for a three-week recess was swept through the senate yesterday with enthusiasm, but it bumped against stone-wall opposition in the lower house where it was definitely and decidedly rejected.

The recess plan, which was approved by the senate by a vote of 17 to 7, was to leave the special joint taxation committee at work during the recess to map out a feasible taxation program for

CROSSING DANGEROUS

The Leistville crossing is one of the most dangerous in Pickaway-co. An accident happened there last Friday in which a Canton, O., woman was injured and another occurred Sunday with no one hurt. Cornfields on the southeast and northwest corners have obstructed the view to a large extent.

The corn on the land of Charles Morris on the northeast corner was cut down Tuesday afternoon by state highway employees. Corn still stood on the corner owned by Earl Ketterman.

The truck with its tank-trailer driven by Blackford measured 28 feet. The tank, which was empty, was of 2,100 gallon capacity and owned by Denver Lewis of Wellston, was hauling gasoline and oil for the Ashland Refinery Co., Ashland, Ky. Blackford, its driver, is unmarried.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, of Laurelville R. F. D. 3, were eye-witnesses to the fatal accident. They were enroute to their home from this city when they approached the Leistville intersection. Mr. Thompson said he saw the oil truck traveling toward the Chillicothe from Amanda and saw it slow down. "The truck driver apparently shifted his gears to cross the road after looking both ways," Mr. Thompson said, "and just as he started across the automobile came over the hill. I saw a crash could not be avoided so stopped my automobile." The Thompsons were among the first people to hurry to the aid of the victims.

CRASH TERRIFIC ONE

Chester Valentine, state highway employee, and John McKenzie were conferring out of sight of the intersection over a hill to the northwest, but heard the crash and rushed to the scene. Mrs. Valentine in her home on a hill overlooking the fatal corner also heard the crash as did Mrs. Ferd Damm, who lives about 100 yards from the corner. All hurried to the wreck to do whatever possible. Both women after doing what they could took blankets for the injured and dead.

Mrs. Valentine then returned to her home and, almost exhausted from hurrying to the scene of the crash and back up the hill to her home, called all Circleville's ambulances and the sheriff's office. She was given excellent cooperation at the Citizens' Telephone office in her hurry to obtain aid. The Mader & Ebert ambulance answered the sheriff's summons and Deputy Sheriff Bryan J. Custer sped to the wreck. Within a short time news of the tragedy was spreading over the city; telephone wires were ringing; intimate friends of the family were calling each other spreading the tragic report. It was necessary for the telephone company to add a special operator to care for the great influx of calls.

When the automobile and the truck crashed both hurtled westward into a corn field on the land of Mr. Morris. A tank-trailer on the truck broke loose, and went with the Eichinger car into the field, striking the Chevrolet truck cab and turning it completely around. The Eichinger automobile was completely demolished.

*Isn't it
the TRUTH?*

My Home used to be my castle, where I could live without annoyance—When the door bell rang I could expect a friend or neighbor. But that is not so any more, with solicitors, agents, peddlers, ringing my door doorbell from early morning—yes, even 'till late in the evening using "something free" or smart story methods to gain admission to my home. In fact says the Prudent Housewife and Miss Thrifty Shopper—"I am pestered with peddlers trying their specialty sales arguments on me every day of the week until they have become a NUISANCE."

From the Mayor
to the Citizens and Housewives
of Circleville

THIS IS A WARNING to beware of persons posing as solicitors, salesmen or inspectors seeking admittance to homes. They SHOULD NOT BE ADMITTED UNTIL THEIR CREDENTIALS HAVE BEEN CHECKED UP AND VERIFIED THROUGH DEPENDABLE LOCAL FIRMS OR PERSONS.

IN MANY CASES strangers without verified and reliable credentials are "spotters" or locaters for professional criminals - and according to police records lack of caution on the part of the householders in admitting such strangers has often times resulted in costly property losses and bitter experiences.

DO NOT PAY CASH IN ADVANCE to strangers on any merchandise - as in a number of instances the customer has NEVER RECEIVED ANYTHING for the cash advanced - nor has any refund been made of the initial deposit.

DO NOT CASH CHECKS FOR STRANGERS or issue a check to a stranger as a down-payment on an order - often times these checks have been "altered" and later cashed by a third and innocent party.

IT'S BETTER TO BE SAFE THAN SORRY - be SURE you know who the stranger is at your door before allowing him to enter your home. In case you are suspicious PHONE THE POLICE DEPARTMENT AT ONCE - Phone number 53 as we are anxious to co-operate with our citizens at all times. HIGH PRESSURE - FREE GIFT ARTISTS have been working the residence district of Circleville recently - selling ALL KINDS of merchandise - using the method of "something free" to gain admittance to the homes. This has been - according to police record - a scheme just to get inside the home - as in most cases there is nothing to be given away free.

One NEED NOT BE AFRAID of offending the honest salesman, solicitor or inspector representing a LOCAL FIRM - as THEY HAVE THEIR CREDENTIALS WITH THEM and welcome such investigation - that is why they are required to carry credentials. Protect yourself - ASK FOR CREDENTIALS FROM LOCAL BUSINESS INSTITUTIONS.

Signed:

B. T. HEDGES

Mayor of Circleville.

Who are these bell ringers?

As a Rule many are Floaters---here today and gone tomorrow. They are NOT responsible financially, morally or otherwise. They are NOT taxpayers or voters in any community. Where a local citizen is representing a house-to-house selling firm, he or she secures the majority of business thru the friendly sympathy racket and NOT on the merits of the product. This condition is OVERWORKED in every community---and Master Peddlers are always looking for this class of representative.

Many Are Irresponsible. Men who cannot hold a position of any responsibility for any length of time---and continually float from one job to another. The large number of classified ads reading "Agents Wanted---Canvassers---Peddlers---Solicitors---Representatives to sell from house-to-house" confirms the uncertainty of the peddler.

If a Strange Man Came to Your Door---with nothing to sell---asking for permission to come into your home---WOULD YOU LET HIM IN?

Can You Afford to Take a Chance?

What Values Have These Peddlers To Offer?

Do you always receive THE SAME QUALITY as in sample shown? A large majority of these Peddlers are representing firms which go into the wholesale market and buy SECONDS--IMPERFECTS paying equally as much as your merchant does for perfect standards. When the merchandise you ordered from the peddler arrives---and it DOES NOT PROVE SATISFACTORY---Can You Get Your Money Back? Try to locate the clever salesman who collected your deposit.

Do Not Confuse
Representatives of Local Institutions With
the Itinerant Peddler

Representative of legitimate local business houses, and growers of produce, who are furnishing employment to local people, paying local taxes, are entitled to an interview. Protect yourself. Ask the man who calls at your house, for credentials from local institutions.

"Relief Lists"

It is estimated that already the NRA program has taken 2,000,000 people off the unemployment lists and put them in jobs. This means, conservatively figured, that a billion dollars a year is already added to the purchasing power of the American people, and the movement is only beginning. This circumstance alone ought to be sufficient assurance to those timid people who have been doubting the success of the great experiment.

Ultimately, of course, all the business of the United States will be conducted under the codes, which have for their chief purpose correction of the unemployment situation. Elements in this accomplishment are the elimination of child labor, the shortening of hours of work, and a higher wage scale. It needs no statistician to demonstrate that every decrease of unemployment brings us closer to the end of economic depression, for every man who is earning a living indirectly contributes by what he buys to the employment of others, and so the wheels of commerce will turn faster and faster until the great depression becomes merely a memory. The rapidity with which we reach this desired goal depends on the promptness with which industry generally comes into the fold. Already most of the larger industries are in. But the smaller manufacturers, or merchant, taken in the mass, is even more important than the big corporations. Incidentally, the consumer must play his part. Every purchase made now is an investment, the dividends of which will come out of future prosperity. Moreover, the encouragement the consumer can give to the business that comply with the requirements of the NRA will not only encourage him but will be a warning to those who are holding back that if they expect to share in the general revival they had better get aboard at once.

We predict success for Cuba's new president, Cespedes, whose name is pronounced "Thess-pay-days." How can a politician with a name like that fail in times like these?

Advocate 'Devil's Island'

TWICE in the last fortnight former police commissioners of New York and Philadelphia, one a former general in the marines, have seriously proposed to the senate sub-committee on racketeering that the United States send its kidnapers, racketeers and other undesirables to a Devil's Island, copied after that of France off the coast of French Guiana in South America.

Specifications they give for a suitable place of exile are that it be too hot, infested with insects, devoid of water that is too fresh and beyond swimming distance of the mainland.

Such a place would be too good for the kidnaper and the gunman who slays in cold blood, but would it prove the crime deterrent its advocates say it would? Probably not.

A Devil's Island truly devilish has not abolished crimes of violence in France. The criminal population of the island, which is really a group of small islands, has never fallen off except when public protest has restrained the courts from condemning men to that almost certain death.

France's Devil's Island has given the French people a world-wide reputation for being inhumane and barbarous. So vigorous and persistent has been the agitation for its abolition that its end as a penal colony is believed near. Does America covet the cloak Paris throws aside?

Unsocial citizens should, it is true, be separated from the social, but society makes itself equally unsocial when it stoops to torture. Our Devil's Island should be a place where life is hard, not impossible.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Lovely Joan Hastings lives a secluded life with her two stern, old aunts, Evvie and Babe Van Fleet, in Sausalito, California. She falls in love with Bill Martin, young mechanic. Learning this, Aunt Evvie sends Joan away to Pennsylvania to school. Enroute, Joan slips off the train and goes to Bill's home only to find that he left town without leaving an address. She did not know Bill had gone to see her and Evvie upbraided him, saying if he loved Joan he would give her up and not try to find her as he had nothing to offer her. Joan settles in San Francisco, unknown to her aunts. She boards with good-natured Mrs. Maisie Kimmer and works in a department store. Bill, in the meantime, is befriended by Rollo Keyes, wealthy playboy. Rollo's father, believing Bill may have a good influence on his son, gives him a position where he learns surveying. He does not try to get in touch with Joan as he wants to be a success before he goes to her. Bill's mother returns Joan's letters to her as she does not know her son's address, but she assures Joan he is all right as he sends money regularly. Joan believes Bill no longer cares and is broken-hearted. Maisie tries in vain to make her forget.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIX

One night when she came home after work she found the table set with the lace tablecloth, and all the best silver that Maisie kept in little red flannel cases, under the mattress in the wall bed. Maisie herself was all in a flutter, frying squabs in the kitchen. She pointed to Joan's room with a long handled kitchen fork—"Fanny's in your room, resting. She just got back from New York—she's going to stay for dinner."

"Fanny?"
"My oldest daughter—you know—the one I said was a dressmaker and married a French aviator—de Guityr her name is—she calls it Francine de Guityr. Don't you remember I said she owned that swell place on Sutter Street—Maison Francine? Well, she sank into all the time to look over the styles, and she just got back—just put the salad on the table, will you, dearie, and call her?"

Madame de Guityr—one no one but Maisie could have thought of her as Fanny—had the most languid of smiles for Joan. She sank into her chair with a faint stir of pungent Oriental scent, from her austere simple black crepe gown. Her dark red hair was brushed severely back from her thin, blue-white face, her thin lips were scarlet, her cold gray eyes were shadowed with coal black, and long, long lashes.

Maisie was pathetically proud of her. She pressed delicacies upon her, she plied her with questions, and ran an inquiring finger through the dark red waves of her hair. "He done a good job, I hate that regular hona shade they get. But I do wish you'd get a little rouge on your cheeks, and put on a little jewelry. I like a little color myself. I wish you could have seen the color Joan had when she came."

"When she came?" Madame de Guityr smiled. "What did you do to her—ruin her digestion with your cooking?"
"Not I. She hasn't been very happy—little love affair, and that basement air—she works in the basement at McBride's."

"Really?" Madame de Guityr for all her aesthetic air was demolishing her squash, picking the bones with small, white teeth.
"But I don't work in the basement any more—I didn't tell you, did I?" Joan interrupted.

"Not!" Maisie cried, pleased and disappointed at the same time. "You close-mouthed little thing!"
"I meant to—I just didn't," Joan said contritely. She was suddenly ashamed. It had meant so little to her, she had really forgotten that Maisie would be pleased.

Maisie understood. She reached over, and pressed the girl's cold guilty of all the crimes charged against him. If the reports relating to his rule are true only to a fractional degree, however, there seems available ample evidence to support charges of a serious nature against the former president.

In fleeing his country when things became too hot for him to tarry longer, Machado followed the practice of overthrown dictators in South American countries. It has been customary for such officials under similar circumstances to fill their trunks with spoils and seek foreign and more healthful climates where they could enjoy their reputedly ill-gotten fortunes. And this they were permitted to do.

Could such fugitives be returned and placed on trial for their alleged misdeeds, the cause of good government might be materially helped. The one drawback to this course would be the difficulty of assuring them a fair trial. If this possibility of injustice being done could be overcome, there would be much to commend the course.

hand in her warm one. "Never mind—tell us now," she said warmly.

"It was just last Saturday. They were having a fashion show and one of the models was ill, so they got me. I—I rather like it." Francine de Guityr was listening. She was looking at Joan, closely, critically, as one looks at a painting, or a piece of bronze. The languid air had slipped from her. Her eyes grew dark and snapping, like Maisie's.

"Walk into the front room and back, will you?"
Joan obeyed, self-consciously. "That would do very nicely—for McBride's," she said, and pushed the skeleton of the squab away. "It wouldn't go in my place. Finished—I must have everything finished perfectly." She leaned forward, and looked at Joan again. "Gee, Ma," she said at last, without a trace of the foreign accent Joan had found so puzzling in

Bill hadn't cared. He said that last night, "I can't leave you!" But he did—

Maisie's daughter. "Do you realize how that girl would look in my French jeune fille things? Sell! Listen, girlie—you go around to McBride's and tell them you're working for the Maison Francine."

"There—I knew something nice would happen!" Maisie cried. "You see, dearie—"

Madame de Guityr was still studying Joan through half-closed eyes. She waved a white hand, with shining, deep pink nails. "The best jeune fille type. Refined. Spirituelle. Oh, my heavens—how young you are! I'll make a specialty of bridal gowns—wistful, young looking ones—all virginal with tulle."

Joan stood up, her face flaming. "Please," she begged—"please don't—"

Once—was it really only last spring?—Joan dreamed of herself in a bridal gown, a shimmering silken thing, fragrant with orange blossoms, misty with tulle. She thought of herself, starchy-eyed with happiness, looking up at Bill, and Aunt Babe and Aunt Evvie crackling in new black taffetas, with their best pearl brooches pinned on, and their company smiles, beaming from the dim family pew.

"Our niece, Joan Hastings, is marrying Mr. William Martin. . . yes, we're very proud—he's a big engineer now, you know!"

Dream figures crowding round her, tinkle of laughter, shower of rose petals—"Good bye! Good bye! Good luck!"—and her arm on Bill's.

Every girl's dream of herself as a bride. Precious as life, bright as stardust, sure as death—and for Joan, gone—gone so soon.

Now she walked in wedding finery, every day in Francine's shop. Shimmer of satin, shadow of lace, breath of orange blossoms—and her heart like lead in her side.

Never had Francine sold so many bridal gowns. Never was there such a bumper crop of Francine-outfitted brides. Fat girls and thin girls. Girls with eager, plain faces. Girls with bright, pretty faces. They came with well-lined purses, and bought the wistful, wispy gowns that Joan modeled.

Up and down, up and down the soft gray carpet Joan walked, with the little, mincing, hesitating step that Francine taught her. Slender arms outstretched, to show the graceful line. Narrow feet, high arched and twinkling, kicking back the long lace veil, as she turned and posed on the raised dais.

"You see," Francine would purr, "what I have done? The simplicity and the air . . . expensive? . . . Yes, madame, but if one will have beauty one must pay . . . see, the poetry of it . . . and only once can your daughter have a real wedding gown and veil—"

They always weakened and bought. Joan was the ideal dressmaker's bride. Her clear pallor, the wistful, far-away look in her sea-green eyes gave the gowns mystery, and a certain, poignant, luring romance that no hard-boiled flapper could resist. They wanted to look like that on their wedding day—and so Joan's heartbreak brought Francine dollars.

If hearts break, Joan's broke when Bill's letter came back unclaimed. It was the end of hope, and the end of faith. She would have waited for ever—gone on loving and trusting always. And he had forgotten her—already. Forgotten to mention her name, to even send her a picture postcard when he wrote to his mother.

Bill was her God. To him she sacrificed everything. Home, future, love—everything—and wished she had more to give.

And he hadn't cared. When he was near he took the love she gave so prodigally, and loved her too. "I can't go!" he cried that last night. "I can't leave you!" But he did—and never even bothered to send her letters, the poor little pile of them that had waited so long in his mother's kitchen, and were now turned into ashes in Maisie's garbage can.

That was what hurt the most—to know that it hadn't been real love, that it had all been for nothing. That all her life she would have to live with the bitter memory, not of a lost love, but just a sordid, cheap mistake. And she was only eighteen, and would have to go on living for years and years . . . remembering . . . modeling dresses . . .

Maisie, dear, blundering Maisie, wanted her to model for Francine, so she did. It pleased Maisie, and she didn't care what happened to her any more, there was nothing left to live for.

"Be nice to her," Francine urged, "I want all my girls to be happy together, and she doesn't mean to be unkind—it's just her way."

So—because Madame (they called Francine Madame) sponsored her, and she was supposed to be living with Madame's mother, "the girls" made a few friendly advances, but only Maud Murphy, the fat blonde blonde filter, liked her—and Maud liked most everybody.

The house-to-house peddler and solicitor, who is he, and what shall we do with him? seems to be a growing problem of the hour. As the spring season opens up this person appears as regularly as the first robin or the dandelion on the lawn. In former years the door bell ringer was not so numerous and his visit was treated as a sort of pleasing variation in the day's dull career, but now things are different. The busy housekeeper is obliged to drop her cooking, sewing, ironing, or whatever task at which she may be engaged and to the door every half hour and listen for a short or long period to harangue of the itinerant peddler.

And this is not the worst phase of the situation. The peddler of today is not the same species as the one who called at the door yesterday. The present day visitor has proven himself, in many instances, to be a rascal using his mission as a would-be itinerant merchant merely as a subterfuge to cover his real outfit, get the key of the house for real robbers who will visit the place later on, or perhaps to intimidate the lady who answers the door and to scare her into giving him money or valuables.

In many cases these men are bona fide agents taking orders for legitimate merchants. But even in this instance they can offer no better inducements than can be obtained from the home merchant. A profuse amount of gilt talk has in many cases won an order from the housewife who, after she receives the goods she has ordered, invariably regrets the transaction and is made to realize that she could have done far better from the local merchant.

It must be remembered that these house-to-house peddlers are what may be termed as "floaters." In most cases they are not property owners they have no fixed place of abode, and they are not to be paid or established to keep up. The money paid them invariably is sent to some other city and the home community is to a certain extent drained of money that should rightly be distributed among the business concerns that are helping to support our schools, churches and other community institutions.

Now as to the remedy, and this may be briefly summed up by stating that a concerted movement on the part of the housewives of the community in the matter of discouraging the house-to-house visitor would serve the purpose admirably and soon rid the district of the nuisance. Very the perseverance and work and a warning from the Mayor that will interest you. Read it.

Workers Labor Under Conditions Unheard Of in the Old Days

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

SOMETIMES WE complain about our generation, saying things now are not as they used to be. We look to the past for goodness, perfect conduct, and worth whiteness.

When we read reports about crimes of violence and moral turpitude, it is natural to wonder if the world were not better in olden days. We are a bit of the times.

But there are so many bright spots in the picture that we may well believe society is really progressing. Perhaps the better care of those who work with their hands is sufficient proof that the world is moving forward and upward.

A few weeks ago I visited a great factory in New England. Going to a city up there to attend a wedding, we found ourselves the guests of a charming family. Our host asked me to visit his factory where sixteen hundred men and women are employed.

It is always interesting to me to study the physical and moral conditions under which human beings work. This establishment I found to be a model in its attention to sanitation and physical surroundings.

What I particularly have in mind to tell you about is a sign board displayed in a prominent place, making daily announcement of the accident record in that organization. On the occasion of my visit it read as follows:

"This factory was operated 1,668 days without lost time due to accident."

That statement gives evidence of the remarkable care afforded the workmen. Every possible device is used to protect against injury and disease. Prizes are offered the foreman who reports the highest record of freedom from accident.

The large, airy, unshiny rooms contribute to the health of the employees. Mechanical ventilation carries away the fumes of chemicals and the vitiated air. First-aid facilities and constant medical supervision give further guarantee of physical well-being.

Were such precautions taken in older days? They were not. Disabling and even fatal accidents were of almost daily occurrence in every shop and factory.

The modern organization of employees and the willingness of the owners to confer with them, has been another factor of progress. Really, the world is progressing. My host at the wedding convinces me of that truth.

Girl Scout News

The Circleville Girl Scout troop No. 2 held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Ward Robinson Tuesday.

The meeting was opened by the Pledge of Allegiance and the singing of the Star Spangled Banner. The overnight hike was postponed until next Tuesday. The girls are to meet at four o'clock at the home of Helen Celler, Montclair-ave, to go to Zwicker's grove for a stew supper.

Announcement was made of a Court of Review on Sept. 8.

Following the meeting the troop went to Dr. Bales' and received instructions on first aid work. MARY FICKAHD, Scribe.

Summer irrigation of strawberries, to provide a good bed for next year, is proving a valuable practice this summer.

FINDS MOTHER AT 28

NEVADA, Ia.—Adopted when a day old, Mrs. Gladys Pryor Popa, 28, of Ledyard, Ia., never saw her mother, Mrs. Edith Gates of Ames, Ia., until recently. She learned that she was an adopted child at 16, and spent 12 years searching for her real mother, only to learn that they had lived their lives within 60 miles of each other.

GIVING wheat the same buying power that it had in the period before the World War is the goal of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This chart shows how big the problem is. In 1914 8 sacks of wheat would buy a pair of shoes, a barrel of flour, a chair, and a plow. In 1925 it took 9 sacks of wheat to buy the same set of articles. In 1930 it took 19 sacks of wheat and early in 1933 it took 22 sacks of wheat. The cause of the low buying power is too great a supply. To remedy the situation, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a campaign asking farmers to reduce their acreage for the 1934 and 1935 crops so that the return from a bushel of wheat will be once more what it was in the pre-war period, in its power to buy the goods which farmers need. The goal of the wheat administration is the 1914 basis, on which 8 sacks of wheat would buy the bill of goods pictured here.

R. L. IMMELL EXPLAINS 'NORMAL' VALUE IN APPRAISAL OF FARM

Miss Ethel Brobst, secretary-treasurer of the Pickaway-co National Farm Loan association, recently received from R. L. Immell, agent of the land bank commission, at Louisville, whom she represents as a correspondent in Pickaway-co, an explanation of the term "normal" value as it is applied to the appraisal of farms.

This will be particularly interesting to Pickaway-co farmers because of the large number of applications for loans from the Land Bank Commissioner and because the normal value of a farm as arrived at by an official appraiser has a very important bearing upon the amount of money which may be loaned by the Commissioner of the Land Bank.

The land specifier that the basis of appraisal in all cases is the normal value of the land for agricultural purposes and its earning power for such purposes is a principal factor," says Mr. Immell. "Where a farm must be appraised on its earning power, crop yields and prices, as well as cost of operation, including overhead charges such as taxes and depreciation, must be taken into consideration, rather than merely considering present soil prices."

"Since a Land Bank loan or a Commissioner's loan is made for a long series of years, it is only natural that the normal agricultural value be considered in appraising the land for such loans, because as we have witnessed in the last few years, the selling price of farms may vary considerably even over so short a period as ten years. In the open market, a farm may be worth more or it may be worth less than the normal agricultural value."

The appraisers who place values on farm properties upon which their owners wish to secure loans from the Land Bank or Land Bank Commissioner estimate the production of the land in terms of crops, livestock and livestock products, then use the average of farm commodity prices between August 1906 and July 1917 to determine the return of the products. Costs of production, such as hired labor, machinery costs and taxes are then deducted from estimating the earning power of farms.

Then there are the questions of drainage, overflow and erosion; insect and plant pests and diseases; the supply of water, accessibility to markets, transportation facilities, location of the school and church and the general character and spirit of the community. All of these have varying degrees of influence upon the value of a farm and they may be different today than they were in the period 1909-14.

Five pairs of motion picture players were reunited on the RKO lot during the production of "Professional Sweetheart," the Cliftona Theater's feature burlesque life in a broadcasting studio.

Ginger Rogers, who made her screen debut in "Young Man of Manhattan" opposite Norman Foster, has the same leading man in "Professional Sweetheart." Miss Rogers also appears in the film with Gregory Ratoff, under whom she starred in his fabliau version of "Girl Crazy."

Allen Jenkins and Frank McHugh provide the third reunion. They supplied the comedy relief in RKO-Radio Picture "Tomorrow at Seven," as they do in the current production.

The fourth reunion is that of Zasu Pitts and Lucien Littlefield, in the roles of sob sister and radio announcer in "Professional Sweetheart." Recently co-featured in "Strangers at the Evening," they earned acclaim for their characterizations.

Also cast in "Professional Sweetheart" are Edgar Kennedy and Franklin Pangborn, who form the fifth pair. Together they have appeared in a number of two-reel comedies.

Huddle-Mason Nuptials Read at Stoutsville Church Today

Marked with simplicity was the wedding uniting in marriage Miss Winifred Huddle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. P. Huddle of Stoutsville, and Mr. Carl Mason, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Mason, Watt-st., this city. The ceremony was read at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning in the Reformed church at Stoutsville with Rev. Walter E. Cherry, pastor officiating in the presence of twenty-five guests, members of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The couple was unattended.

The bride was attired in an eggshell velvet gown fashioned ankle length with which she wore brown hat and gloves. Her shoulder corsage was of talisman roses.

Following the nuptials a wedding breakfast was held at the bride's home. Out-of-town guests were Miss Lolobell Black of Lancaster; John Ryan and Vattier Courtwright, this city; Miss Ethel Durbin, Miss Dorothy Reichman, Mrs. J. L. Claggett and Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Huddle, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, all of Cincinnati.

Mrs. Mason is a graduate of the Stoutsville high school and of the Teachers' college at Miami university, Oxford. She also attended the University of Cincinnati where she was a member of Alpha Delta Theta sorority, and for the past four years has been a teacher in the Stoutsville school.

Mr. Mason graduated from the local high school and attended Capital university, Columbus. He is a graduate of Miami university, and for the past several years has been associated in business with his father and uncle at the Mason Brothers Co.

The couple left after the breakfast on a short motor trip South and upon their return Labor Day will be at home to their friends at 131 N. Pickaway-st.

JUNE 15 MARRIAGE IS ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. John Riggins, of Pickaway-twp., are announcing the marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha Ann, to Mr. Charles W. Bennet, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Bennet of Columbus.

The marriage took place in Jeffersonville, Ind., June 15, with Rev. White, pastor of the M. E. church of that city, officiating. The bride graduated from Pickaway-twp. high school this last spring. Mr. Bennet is associated with an interior decorating company in Columbus.

The couple will reside at 600 Lincoln-ave, Columbus.

KING CAROL

PRINCE MICHAEL

Reports that King Carol of Rumania is planning to marry Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired beauty for whom he once gave up his throne and his throne, are current in London, where it is believed in diplomatic circles that such an occurrence would result in the playboy king again losing his throne. Carol's affairs of the heart have occasioned no little grief to his subjects since his first escapade in 1918, when he eloped and married Zizi Lambrino, a commoner, in Odessa, Russia. His marriage to Princess Helen, following annulment of his first venture, came to grief when he fled the country with Mme. Lupescu. Helen divorced him, and his son, Michael, ruled as king until Carol returned in 1930.

DRESBACH REUNION HELD NEAR HALLSVILLE

The descendants of Jacob and Elizabeth Harvey Dresbach met for their annual reunion at the Herman Dresbach grove near Hallsville, Sunday. Dr. Melvin Dresbach, of Albany, N. Y., was the guest of honor this year and during the afternoon made some interesting pictures of the group with his moving picture camera purchased recently in Berlin, Germany, while he was doing research work at the university there.

The picnic dinner was followed by a period of visiting and story telling, after which a short business meeting was held. E. W. Dresbach was elected president; Harland Dresbach, vice president; Warner Clark treasurer, and Mrs. Judd H. Dresbach, secretary and historian. A date was set for all future reunions for the last Sunday in July. It was voted to meet next year at Ash Cave with Miss Jessie Dresbach chairman of dinner arrangements. Mrs. Henry Dresbach and daughter, Grace, and Mrs. Clyde Beougher were appointed in charge of the program and stunts.

After the business session refreshments were served to three guests beside the honored guest and the following members of the family.

Mrs. Rachel Dresbach, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wachter of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Beougher of West Liberty; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dresbach and daughters, Ann, Eleanor, Dorothy and Margie, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Dresbach and daughters, Jessie, Florence, Helen and Mrs. Mabel Andrews and daughter Peggy and Miss Anne G. Dresbach of this city; Mr. and Mrs. Warner Clark and Evelyn and Mr. and Mrs. Judd H. "BUY YOUR ICE CREAM FROM A FURNAS DEALER"

furnas Ice Cream

The Cream of Quality.

I've Often Wondered

By PAT J. KIRWIN
WHO originated that famous page one slogan of the New York Times, "All the News That's Fit to Print?"

Louis Wiley, business manager of The Times, explains that the slogan was devised by Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, the publisher of The Times, who wished to emphasize the quality of The Times as a newspaper appealing to the intelligent, discriminating reader. It was also suggested by a slogan of the Philadelphia Times, "All the News."

From a very interesting "History of the New York Times" by Mr. Wiley, the following extracts are taken:

"This ideal of The Times (a paper whose first object was to get the news promptly and publish it with due attention to its relative value) a paper to conducted that nobody need be ashamed to be seen reading it, but containing all the solid content which intelligent readers wanted, and for which, in desperation, they sometimes had to burrow in the muck heaps of the 'yellow' was presently expressed in the motto, 'All the News That's Fit to Print,' first published on the editorial page on October 25, 1896, and carried in a box on the front page from February 10 of the following year down to the present day."

"This motto when adopted, aroused a good deal of discussion which was fostered and abetted by the management of the paper. For some months a huge sign at 23rd St. and Broadway made known to the passing throng the legend of The Times. There were some editorial expositions of the ideal expressed by the motto, and after these had made Times readers familiar with the intentions of the new publisher, a prize of $100 was offered for any ten-word motto to which seemed better to express those ideals. Richard Watson Gilder, editor of the Century, was asked to act as judge in the contest, which brought out some 20,000 suggestions, of which 150 were thought good enough to publish. The prize was given to 'All the World's News, but Not a School for Scandal.' To the editors of The Times this did not seem as satisfactory as their own device, so though the inventor of this motto got his $100, 'All the News That's Fit to Print' continued to be the motto of the paper."

FOUR STEPS NEEDED TO JOIN CROP PLAN

To become a member of the Pickaway-co Wheat Control Association, and become eligible to receive benefit payments for reducing wheat acreage, a farmer must take four steps.

First, he applies for a contract by signing, in triplicate, application blanks provided by the community wheat committee.

Second, he makes a simple sketch map of his farm, showing the location of fields, their size, and the kind of crops grown upon each field in 1933.

Third, after his allotment is certified by the community committee from information contained in the application blanks, he signs a contract with the United States Government. This, too, he signs in triplicate. He keeps one, the County Wheat Control Association files the other, and the third is sent to Washington.

Forms for the recording of this evidence are provided by the community wheat committee. These forms, according to Guy Dowdy, Emergency Agricultural Assistant are required and furnished simply to help producer prove his claim to receive benefit payment with the least trouble possible.

*Isn't it
the TRUTH?*

My Home used to be my castle, where I could live without annoyance—When the door bell rang I could expect a friend or neighbor. But that is not so any more, with solicitors, agents, peddlers, ringing my door doorbell from early morning—yes, even 'till late in the evening using "something free" or smart story methods to gain admission to my home. In fact says the Prudent Housewife and Miss Thrifty Shopper—"I am pestered with peddlers trying their specialty sales arguments on me every day of the week until they have become a NUISANCE."

From the Mayor
to the Citizens and Housewives
of Circleville

THIS IS A WARNING to beware of persons posing as solicitors, salesmen or inspectors seeking admittance to homes. They SHOULD NOT BE ADMITTED UNTIL THEIR CREDENTIALS HAVE BEEN CHECKED UP AND VERIFIED THROUGH DEPENDABLE LOCAL FIRMS OR PERSONS.

IN MANY CASES strangers without verified and reliable credentials are "spotters" or locaters for professional criminals - and according to police records lack of caution on the part of the householders in admitting such strangers has often times resulted in costly property losses and bitter experiences.

DO NOT PAY CASH IN ADVANCE to strangers on any merchandise - as in a number of instances the customer has NEVER RECEIVED ANYTHING for the cash advanced - nor has any refund been made of the initial deposit.

DO NOT CASH CHECKS FOR STRANGERS or issue a check to a stranger as a down-payment on an order - often times these checks have been "altered" and later cashed by a third and innocent party.

IT'S BETTER TO BE SAFE THAN SORRY - be SURE you know who the stranger is at your door before allowing him to enter your home. In case you are suspicious PHONE THE POLICE DEPARTMENT AT ONCE - Phone number 53 as we are anxious to co-operate with our citizens at all times. HIGH PRESSURE - FREE GIFT ARTISTS have been working the residence district of Circleville recently - selling ALL KINDS of merchandise - using the method of "something free" to gain admittance to the homes. This has been - according to police record - a scheme just to get inside the home - as in most cases there is nothing to be given away free.

One NEED NOT BE AFRAID of offending the honest salesman, solicitor or inspector representing a LOCAL FIRM - as THEY HAVE THEIR CREDENTIALS WITH THEM and welcome such investigation - that is why they are required to carry credentials. Protect yourself - ASK FOR CREDENTIALS FROM LOCAL BUSINESS INSTITUTIONS.

Signed:

B. T. HEDGES

Mayor of Circleville.

Who are these bell ringers?

As a Rule many are Floaters---here today and gone tomorrow. They are NOT responsible financially, morally or otherwise. They are NOT taxpayers or voters in any community. Where a local citizen is representing a house-to-house selling firm, he or she secures the majority of business thru the friendly sympathy racket and NOT on the merits of the product. This condition is OVERWORKED in every community---and Master Peddlers are always looking for this class of representative.

Many Are Irresponsible. Men who cannot hold a position of any responsibility for any length of time---and continually float from one job to another. The large number of classified ads reading "Agents Wanted---Cavassers---Peddlers---Solicitors---Representatives to sell from house-to-house" confirms the uncertainty of the peddler.

If a Strange Man Came to Your Door---with nothing to sell---asking for permission to come into your home---WOULD YOU LET HIM IN?

Can You Afford to Take a Chance?

What Values Have These Peddlers To Offer?

Do you always receive THE SAME QUALITY as in sample shown? A large majority of these Peddlers are representing firms which go into the wholesale market and buy SECONDS--IMPERFECTS paying equally as much as your merchant does for perfect standards. When the merchandise you ordered from the peddler arrives---and it DOES NOT PROVE SATISFACTORY---Can You Get Your Money Back? Try to locate the clever salesman who collected your deposit.

Do Not Confuse
Representatives of Local Institutions With
the Itinerant Peddler

Representative of legitimate local business houses, and growers of produce, who are furnishing employment to local people, paying local taxes, are entitled to an interview. Protect yourself. Ask the man who calls at your house, for credentials from local institutions.

"Relief Lists"

It is estimated that already the

NRA program has taken 2,000,000 people off the unemployment lists and put them in jobs. This means, conservatively figured, that a billion dollars a year is already added to the purchasing power of the American people, and the movement is only beginning. This circumstance alone ought to be sufficient assurance to those timid people who have been doubting the success of the great experiment.

Ultimately, of course, all the business of the United States will be conducted under the codes, which have for their chief purpose

correction of the unemployment situation. Elements in this accomplishment are the elimination of child labor, the shortening of hours of work, and a higher wage scale. It needs no statistician to demonstrate that every decrease of unemployment brings us closer to the end of economic depression, and every man who is earning a living indirectly contributes by what he buys to the employment of others, and so the wheels of commerce will turn faster and faster until the great depression becomes merely a memory. The rapidity with which we reach this desired goal depends on the promptness with which industry generally comes into the fold.

Already most of the larger industries are in. But the smaller manufacturers are taking time in the mass, is even more important than the big corporations. Inidentally, the consumer must play his part. Every purchase made now is an investment, the dividends of which will come out of future prosperity. Moreover, the encouragement the consumer can give to the business that complies with the requirements of the NRA will not only encourage him but will be a warning to those who are holding back that if they expect to share in the general revival they had better get aboard at once.

Advocate 'Devil's Island

TWICE in the last fortnight former police commissioners of New York and Philadelphia,

one a former general in the marines, have seriously proposed to the senate sub-committee on racketeering that the United States send its kidnappers, racketters and other undesirables to a Devil's Island, copied after that of France off the coast of French

Guiana in South America.

Specifications they give for a suitable place of exile are that it be too hot, infested with insects, devoid of water that is too fresh and beyond swimming distance of the mainland.

Such a place would be too good for the kidnaper and the gunman who slays in cold blood, but would it prove the crime deterrent its advocates say it would? Probably not.

A Devil's Island truly devilish has not abolished crimes of violence in France. The criminal population of the island, which is really a group of small islands, has never fallen off except when public protest has restrained the courts from condemning men to that almost certain death.

France's Devil's Island has given the French people a worldwide reputation for being inhumane and barbarous. So vigorous and persistent has been the agitation for its abolition that its end as a penal colony is believed near. Doubtless the French covet

the cloak Paris throws aside.

Unsocial citizens, however, it is true, he separated from the social,

but society makes itself equally unsocial when it stoops to torture. Our Devil's Island should be a place where life is hard, not impossible.

"STOLEN LOVE"

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Lovely Joan Hastings lives a secluded life with her two stern, old aunts, Evvie and Babe Van Fleet,

in Sausalito, California. She falls in love with Bill Martin, young mechanic. Learning this Aunt Ev-vie sends Joan away to Pennsylvania to school. Enroute, Joan slips off the train and goes to Bill's home only to find that he left town without leaving an address. She did not know Bill had gone to see her and Evvie upbraided him, saying if he loved Joan he would give her up and not try to find her as he had nothing to offer her. Joan settles in San Francisco, unknown to her aunts. She boards with good-natured Mrs. Maisie Kimmer and works in a department store. Bill, in the meantime, is a friend of Rollo Keyes, wealthy playboy.

Rollo's father, believing Bill may have a good influence on his son, gives him a position where he learns surveying. He does not try to get in touch with Joan as he wants to be a friend before he goes to her. Bill's mother returns

Joan's letters to her as she does not know her son's address, but she assures Joan he is all right as he sends money regularly. Joan believes Bill no longer cares and is broken-hearted. Maisie tries in vain to make her forget.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIX

One night when she came home after work she found the table set with the lace tablecloth, and all the best silver that Maisie kept in little red flannel cases, under the matress in the wall bed. Maisie herself was all in a flutter, trying squibs in the kitchen. She pointed to Joan's room with a long-handled kitchen fork—"Fanny's in your room, resting. She just got back from New York—she's going to stay for dinner."

"Fanny?"

"My oldest daughter—you know

—the one I said was a dressmaker and married a French aviator—de

Guitry her name is—she calls it

Francine de Guitry. Don't you remember I said she owned that swell

place on Sutter Street—Maison

Francine? Well, she goes East all the time to look over the styles and she just got back—just put the salad on the table, will you, dearie, and call her."

Madame de Guitry—no one but Maisie could have thought of her as Fanny—had the most languid of eyes for Joan. She sank into her chair with a faint stir of pungent

Oriental scent, from her austere simple black crepe gown. Her dark hair was brushed severely back from her thin, blue-white face. Her thin lips were scarlet, her cold gray eyes were shadowed with coal black, amazingly long lashes.

"She couldn't be Maisie's daughter!"

Maisie was pathetically proud of her. She pressed delicacies upon her, she plied her with questions, and ran an inquiring finger through her red hair. She was in her basement air, she works in the basement at McBride's."

have plowed up their fields. Secretary Wallace says privately this is all hokey. He claims that the processing tax is only an infinitesimal fraction of the increased cost of textiles. Finally he says that this is just another attempt to make the farmer the goat.

Merry-Go-Round
Summer Welles, retiring ambassador to Cuba, and Jefferson Caffery, newly appointed to that job, have set aside one day in which to compare notes. Caffery takes over the reconstruction of Cuba. Welles takes over State Department relations with all Latin America. They will probably meet in Key West. It will be a full day. Walter Teagle of Standard Oil is a changed man. He is pro-labor. He is one of General Johnson's staunchest supporters. Teagle has a huge nose. He doesn't care how wrinkled his clothes are, goes out in the rain without a raincoat. Oscar Chapman, hard-hitting assistant secretary of the Interior, once was an officer in the Court of Judge Lindsey. Two members of the Cabinet are called "General" instead of "Mr. Secretary." They are Postmaster General Farley and Attorney General Cummings. Alaska's Congressional Delegate, Anthony J. Dimond, was born in New York. He is the son of a former U. S. Commissioner in Alaska. Hawaii's Congressional Delegate, Lincoln Loy McCandless, was born in Pennsylvania. He went to the island in 1882. Ed. Shaughnessy, Assistant Commissioner of Labor, demands that a record be kept of the number of minutes required by each of his stenographers to type a letter; also the number of minutes required to dictate. This would be revealing if done in all government bureaus. New York's NRA executives in General Johnson's NRA say that Washington stenographers lack the speed and zip of their girls in New York. A lot of housewives are wondering what the servant problem will be like after the hotel code fixes high wages and longer hours for domestic help. Bill Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is not sleeping on a bed of roses these days. "Every night," says Bill, "I get down on my knees and pray how to get out of this mess."

One of the first men to suggest the Conservation Camps to F. D. R. was William H. Evans of Los Angeles, former secretary to Charles A. Lindbergh's father. Two ambassadors played golf at Hot Springs, Va., recently. They were Espil of Argentina and Debutchi of Japan. Playing against them were Senora Espil and young Debutchi. The latter won. Selwood is young Dean Acheson, Woodin's chief support in the Treasury, to be seen without a necktie that matches his shirt. He is partial to mauves, grays and browns.

FINDS MOTHER AT 28
NEVADA, Ia.—Adopted when a day old, Mrs. Gladys Pryor Popa, 28, of Ledyard, Ia., never saw her mother, Mrs. Edith Gates of Ames, Ia., until recently. She learned that she was an adopted child at 16, and spent 12 years searching for her real mother, only to learn that they had lived their lives within 60 miles of each other.

GIVING wheat the same buying power that it had in the period before the World War is the goal of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This chart shows how big the problem is. In 1914 8 sacks of wheat would buy a pair of shoes, a barrel of flour, a chair, and a plow.

In 1925 it took 9 sacks of wheat to pay the same set of articles. In 1930 it took 19 sacks of wheat and early in 1933 it took 22 sacks of wheat. The cause of the low buying power is too great a supply. To remedy the situation, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a campaign asking farmers to reduce their acreage for the 1934 and 1935 crops so that the return from a bushel of wheat will be once more what it was in the pre-war period, its power to buy the goods which farmers need. The goal of the wheat administration is the 1914 basis, on which 8 sacks of wheat would buy the bill of goods pictured here.

R. L. IMMELL EXPLAINS 'NORMAL' VALUE IN APPRAISAL OF FARM

Miss Ethel Brobst, secretary-treasurer of the Pickaway-co National Farm Loan association, recently received from R. L. Immell, agent of the land bank commission, at Louisville, whom she represents as a correspondent in Pickaway-co, an explanation of the term "normal" value as it is applied to the appraisal of farms. This will be particularly interesting to Pickaway-co farmers because of the large number of applications for loans from the Land Bank Commissioner and because the normal value of a farm as appraised by an official appraiser has a very important bearing upon the amount of money which may be loaned by the Commissioner of the Land Bank.

The law specifies that the basis of appraisal in all cases is the normal value of the land for agricultural purposes and the earning power for such purposes is a principal factor. "Where a farm must be appraised on its earning power, crop yields and prices, as well as cost of operation, including overhead charges, such as taxes and depreciation, must be taken into consideration, rather than merely considering present sale prices."

"Since a Land Bank loan or a Commissioner's loan is made for a long series of years, it is only natural that the normal agricultural value be considered in appraising the land for such loans, because as we have witnessed in the last few years, the selling price of farm property may vary considerably over over so short a period as ten years. In the open market, a farm may be worth more or it may be worth less than the normal agricultural value."

"The appraiser, who places values on farm properties upon which their owners wish to secure loans from the Land Bank or Land Bank Commissioner estimate the production of the land in terms of crops, livestock and livestock products, then use the average of farm commodity prices between August 1909 and July 1917 to determine the return of the products. Costs of production, such as hired labor, machinery costs, and taxes, are then deducted from estimating the earning power of farms."

Then there are the questions of drainage, overflow and erosion; insect and plant pests and diseases; the supply of water, accessibility to markets, transportation facilities, location of the school and church and the general character and spirit of the community. All of these have varying degrees of influence upon the value of a farm and they may be different today than they were in the period 1909-14.

Also cast in "Professional Sweetheart" are Edgar Kennedy and Franklin Pangborn, who form the fifth pair. Together they have appeared in a number of two-reel comedies.

The selector of "Mauchussets town prohibited a scheduled beer-drinking contest and thereby deprived the country of an opportunity to find out if the new brew is intoxicating."

ZIZI LAMBRINO

Reports that King Carol of Rumania is planning to marry Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired beauty for whom he once gave up his throne and his throne, are current in diplomatic circles that such an occurrence would result in the playboy king again losing his throne. Carol's affairs of the heart have occasioned no little grief to his subjects since his first escape in 1918, when he eloped and married Zizi Lambrino, a commoner, in Odessa, Russia. His marriage to Princess Helen, following annulment of his first venture, came to grief when he fled the country with Mme. Lupescu. Helen divorced him, and his son, Michael, ruled as king until Carol returned in 1930.

The descendants of Jacob and Elizabeth Dresbach met for their annual reunion at the Herman Dresbach grove near Hallsville, Sunday. Dr. Melvin Dresbach, of Albany, N. Y., was the guest of honor this year and during the afternoon made some interesting pictures of the group with his moving picture camera purchased recently in Berlin, Germany, while he was doing research work at the university there.

The picnic dinner was followed by a period of visiting and story telling after which a short business meeting was held. E. W. Dresbach was elected president; Harry Dresbach, vice president; Warner Clark, treasurer, and Mrs. Judd H. Dresbach, secretary and historian. A date was set for all future reunions for the last Sunday in July. It was voted to meet next year at Ash Cave with Miss Jessie Dresbach chairman of dinner arrangements. Mrs. Henry Dresbach and daughter, Grace, and Mrs. Clyde Boughner were appointed in charge of the program and stunts.

After the business session refreshments were served to three guests beside the honored guest and the following members of the family.

Mrs. Rachel Dresbach, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wachtler of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Boughner of West Liberty; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dresbach and daughters, Ann, Eleanor, Dorothy and Margie, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Dresbach and daughters, Jessie, Florence, Helen and Mrs. Mabel Andrews and daughter Peggy and Miss Anna G. "BUY YOUR ICE CREAM FROM A FURNAS DEALER"

furnas Ice Cream
The Cream of Quality.

I've Often Wondered

By PAT J. KIRWIN
WHO originated that famous page one slogan of the New York Times, "All the News That's Fit to Print?"

Louis Wiley, business manager of The Times, explains that the slogan was devised by Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, the publisher of The Times, who wished to emphasize the quality of The Times as a newspaper appealing to the intelligent, discriminating reader. It was also suggested by a slogan of the Philadelphia Times, "All the News."

From a very interesting "History of the New York Times" by Mr. Wiley, the following extracts are taken:

"This ideal of The Times (a paper whose first object was to get the news promptly and publish it with due attention to its relative value) a paper to be conducted that nobody need be ashamed to be seen reading it, but containing all the solid content which intelligent readers wanted, and for which, in desperation, they sometimes had to burrow in the muck heaps of the 'yellow' was presently expressed in the motto, 'All the News that's Fit to Print,' first published on the editorial page on October 25, 1896, and carried in a box on the front page from February 10 of the following year down to the present day."

"This motto when adopted, aroused a good deal of discussion which was fostered and abetted by the management of the paper. For some months a huge sign at 23rd St. and Broadway made known to the passing throng the legend of The Times. There were some editorial expositions of the ideal expressed by the motto, and after these had made Times readers familiar with the intentions of the new publisher, a prize of $100 was offered for any ten-word motto to which seemed better to express those ideals. Richard Watson Gilder, editor of the Century, was asked to act as judge in the contest, which brought out some 20,000 suggestions, of which 150 were thought good enough to publish. The prize was given to 'All the World's News, but Not a School for Scandal.' To the editors of The Times this did not seem as satisfactory as their own device, so though the inventor of this motto got his $100, 'All the News That's Fit to Print' continued to be the motto of the paper."

FOUR STEPS NEEDED TO JOIN CROP PLAN

To become a member of the Pickaway-co. Wheat Control Association, and become eligible to receive benefit payments for reducing wheat acreage, a farmer must take four steps.

First, he applies for a contract by signing in triplicate, application blanks provided by the community wheat committee.

Second, he makes a simple sketch map of his farm, showing the location of fields, their size, and the kind of crops grown upon each field in 1933.

Third, after his allotment is certified by the community committee from information contained in the application blanks, he signs a contract with the United States Government. This, too, he signs in triplicate. He keeps one, the County Wheat Control Association files the other, and the third is sent to Washington.

Fourth, he is expected to secure, if it is possible to do so, confirming evidence to support the statements contained in the contract. This evidence is requested in the form of thresherman's certificates, certificates of disposal, and certificates of shipment of purchase.

Forms for the recording of this evidence are provided by the community wheat committee. These forms, according to Guy Dowdy, Emergency Agricultural Assistant are required and furnished simply to help producer prove his claim to receive benefit payment with the least trouble possible.

Mrs. E. R. Brooks of Circleville who has been quite poorly was able to spend Friday afternoon with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Rowe and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nogel are expecting to attend the World's Fair a few days of this week and on their return home will visit a few days with Frank's father in the northern part of this state.

Mrs. William Walker has been quite poorly since last week, a little better at this writing.

Mrs. Mollie Rodgers was able to return to her home last Wednesday from Berger hospital.

R. L. Rowe and son Lindsey and daughter, Bernice, Ruth and Carolyn, attended the funeral last Thursday of Mr. Rowe's aunt, Miss Hattie Lindsey, who was found dead in bed at the Home Hospital, where she had gone four weeks ago to make her home. She was 78 years of age and very frail and blind.

Thomas Shepard and daughter, Mrs. Sarah Fuller, and Mrs. Alice Ward and husband attended the Shepard reunion at Marysville, O., Sunday.

Miss Lula O'Harris went to Circleville Monday with the intention of having her tonsils removed by Dr. Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wigginton of Washington, C. H. were Sunday afternoon company of R. L. Rowe and family.

Next Sunday morning will be our last preaching services until after conference. We hope to see a goodly number there and by Rev. Hiles good-by with a word of appreciation. We sure regret to have to give him up.
